District Attorney Has Change Of Heart; Campbell Reinstated

The resignation of Argyll Campbell as deputy district attorney which was to have become effective last Monday, was refused the same day by Harry Noland, district attorney, who had originally requested it.

Noland said political enemies in Monterey had brought apparently false charges against Campbell on which he had acted when he made a demand for his deputy's resignation.

Wise members of the political profession were this week watching the thunder and tempest that may soon break overhead as the result of the resignation of Argyll Campbell as deputy district attorney for the peninsula.

Campbell, not only one of the outstanding attorneys in the county, but also a Democratic leader with political power in his hands, was ousted as deputy prosecutor by Harry Noland, recently appointed district attorney.

Noland, in demanding Campbell's resignation, charged his deputy with lack of co-operation and failure to close down the lid on asserted gambling establishments in Monterey.

In handing in his resignation, Campbell commented briefly on the fact that "Harry, whom I always regarded as a friend, should think I have failed in the performance of my duty," saying that "this is not the time to indulge in forecasts about future developments."

Some county political leaders viewed the rift between the two men as a situation that will not be settled permanently until the county election, a year and a half from now. Others believed that before six months are over, Campbell would be back in the deputy prosecutor's chair.

This is not the first time Campbell has been forced to resign. Shortly after Russell Scott was elected district attorney, Campbell was let go and George Allan Smith was appointed as deputy.

Campbell as a defense attorney, obtained the acquittal of so many prisoners, that Scott persuaded him to take back the job as deputy prosecutor. A similar situation, it is predicted, might arise and Campbell will be asked to accept the job again.

On previous occasions, Campbell has refused to either run or receive the appointment as district attorney.

"I don't care to live in Salinas," was the reason given by him for not wanting the post.

John Thompson of Monterey has been appointed as Campbell's successor.

Heiserman charges in the complaint that on the day of the tragedy, Colling invited his sister to take a ride in order that he might demonstrate the car to her. On the way from Pacific Grove to the Highlands, he continues, his sister asked the driver to turn around and take her home, which he failed to do.

When the car plunged over a 30-foot cliff because of asserted "careless and negligent driving on the part of Colling," the woman sustained injuries which resulted in her death four days later.

Carmel Dollars Now Moving More Briskly

Several hundred dollars of Carmel's unemployment money, Carmel Dollars, have been purchased from merchants about town during the past few days by public spirited citizens, reducing to a minimum the number held in the tills of the stores of grocers, meat markets, the Pacific Gas and Electric Co., the Monterey County Water Works and others. A continuation and broadening of this cooperation should insure the acceptance of Carmel Dollars by the merchants without demur.

Now that the citizens are behind Carmel Dollars, it is up to the merchants to accept them, willingly and at all times. Many residents have stated that they have never been offered Carmel Dollars in change by the merchants. This situation should be improved.

Cards bearing the request to ask for Carmel Dollars are now on display in all stores.

NEWS BRIEFS

The Rev. Philip G. Scher, pastor of Carmel Mission and San Carlos church, has been made bishop of the Monterey-Fresno diocese, it was announced this week.

Local anglers who were out on the streams with the opening of the trout season Monday had fair sport generally. A dry winter had left the water clear and unroiled, and the showers of the past week had been too slight of precipitation to muddy the streams. Where often, on the season's opening, fishing has been confined to bait angling, fly casting was possible and successful.

Ney Otis, county probation officer, has been appointed in charge of registration for the civilian conservation corps in Monterey county. He will receive applications from single men between the ages of 18 to 25, who have dependents.

A number of flower lovers of Carmel visited the flower show of the Salinas Woman's Club this week, on Wednesday and Thursday. It was staged in the civic clubhouse on Lincoln Avenue.

Thorough Inspection of City Planned By Fire Department

A complete survey of fire hazards in the residential and business district of Carmel will be undertaken within the next few weeks, according to Fire Chief Robert Leidig.

Together with Birney Adams, assistant fire chief, Leidig is planning to make a thorough inspection of buildings with a view of discovering any possible fire hazards.

Leidig indicated that in many homes there are defective heaters and dangerous stoves that should be condemned for future fire protection.

"We know the danger that would follow if a fire ever got under way here and the wind was blowing right," Chief Leidig pointed out. "It is only through constant stress of fire protection regulations that we have been so fortunate in the past. When we start our inspection, we are hoping to receive full co-operation from everyone."

Back porches that are blocked with old newspapers, bottles and wood are considered by the fire department as unusually dangerous hazards, Chief Leidig explained. In the event of a fire, a blocked back porch might be responsible for loss of life.

A survey will also be made during the inspection of fire hydrants in the village and their condition. It is understood that a definite request for additional hydrants will then be made to the city council.

The inspection of hazards takes place annually in Carmel. This year, however, it is planned to make it more thorough and almost a house-to-house survey.

Shapely Curves Go Over Home Plate As Girls Run Up Score

By Winsor Josselyn

"Atta girl!" It was ladies' day at Carmel Woods last Sunday when the Country Club beat Del Monte 15 to 3. Any day your two girl players reach base three times each in four times up, and score two runs apiece—there goes your old ball game.

On that clear and peaceful afternoon the championship of the Club Section was decided. Del Monte, holding the Pilots blank at first, grabbed two runs and were off to the races. Then something happened. Country Club got its eye on Charlie Nelson's burn ball and scored eight times in the second inning.

Breaks? They chose the Country Club for a pal and you never saw such one-sided favoritism of luck. Trick catches, double plays, singles going for triples, girls scoring under impossible conditions. The Country Club took every Del Monte had and hollered for more, and not even the Pilots, who won their Community Section and await the Country Club for final Abalone League decision, could have beaten them.

On Country Club, Leidig, Townsend, Finley, R. Brownell, Sis Reamer and Tiny Gracia each got two runs. In fact, all but one player on the team managed to score at least once, and this is explained by the fact they reached base three times as often as Del Monte.

Verga, of the opposition, got on base twice and scored one run, while C. Tiedeman did the same and scored two runs—and there the scoring ceased for the entire team. They gave all they had, but the Country Club rode high and handsome and still had the momentum of the Quatr's Arts Ball which the team had attended in uniform and survived intact.

Here's the geometry of the battle:

Fight May Be Mapped Out To Obtain Slash in Water Rates

Possibility that Carmel will join with Pacific Grove and Monterey in a peninsula wide fight to obtain a material reduction in water rates loomed this week as Mayor John Catlin had the matter under consideration.

Both Mayor J. P. Sandholdt of Monterey and Mayor Sheldon Gilmer of Pacific Grove are said to be in accord with Mayor Catlin in an effort to reduce the water rates on the Monterey peninsula.

All three may confer shortly after the city election in Monterey with City Attorney Argyll Campbell, to map out plans for the fight that must be carried to the state railroad commission before the water rates can be reduced.

"It is my belief," Campbell said, "that if a fight for reduced water rates is to be made, the three peninsula cities should get together in order to cut down the expenses involved in obtaining the necessary data."

On several occasions in the past, city officials of Carmel have been approached on the matter of forming a water district and through a bond issue, to purchase the water works.

Because of the expense that such a step would warrant, Carmel has always tabled the issue. It is believed, however, that if a strong enough fight is made before the commission, a substantial cut in the present water rates will be forthcoming.

While no definite data is available, it is understood the Carmel and peninsula water rates are about the highest in the state.

"There is no reason," one Carmel official pointed out, "why a small consumer of water like a family of two, should have to pay as high as three to five dollars a month for water supply."

Highlands Accident

Results in Big Suit

An accident on the Carmel Highlands' road which occurred on December of last year is the basis of a $24,599 damage suit filed in the superior court at Salinas this week by Roy Eugene Heiserman against Joseph Benjamin Colling.

In bringing the action, Heiserman acted as administrator of the estate of his sister, Edna L. Heiserman, killed in the accident.

possible elimination of the kindergarten department are now being fully considered by the board of trustees, it was disclosed this week. While none of the members of the board cares to comment on the proposed changes, it was strongly indicated that a general salary cut would be recommended.

Elimination of the kindergarten and the proposed reduction in salaries, it was said, would result in a material saving in expenditure.

The proposed changes will probably be decided when the school board meets next Tuesday at a special meeting.

New directors of the Community Chest elected this week include the following from Carmel: Ray DeYoe, Mrs. Sidney Fish, Bernard Rowntree, W. W. Wheeler, Mrs. A. M. Allan and Miss Ruth Huntington.

Huge Crowd Aids In Putting Over Quatr's Arts Ball

Except for many headaches and continued post-mortem discussions, the Quatr's Arts ball at Hotel Del Monte Saturday night developed into one of the most successful events staged on the Monterey peninsula in years.

Half of Carmel joined with hundreds of others from all sections of the state who came down especially to take in the affair. The entire lower floor of the hotel was packed with a crowd estimated at around 1200 persons.

The entertainment lived up to expectations—at least for those who were able to see it. At the stroke of midnight, blushing Lady Godiva was carried into the room on a silver platter and from then on until the early hours of the morning, the entertainment continued.

Private parties were given in various parts of the hotel and two orchestras furnished the music for the occasion. At least three-fourths of those present were in costumes, many of them unique and in cases abbreviated to keep in with the theme of the art ball.

Lew Cody, moving picture actor, took the part of master of ceremonies. While there were other Hollywood stars down for the ball, they preferred to remain in shadowed corners drinking ginger-ale.

Over 50 San Francisco and east-bay newspapers were guests at the hotel and came down especially to cover the ball.

Even though you be one who cannot see the many advantages of beer, the only important question to be decided at the May 15 election is, "shall we allow our village to keep beer money at home, or shall this beer money be forced into over-the-hill channels?"

It is not illegal to possess or to transport beer in Carmel. Everyone living here is perfectly free to buy it in Monterey, bring it home, drink it. To vote "no" is a slap in the face of our local merchant. The question is, can he sell beer to our people, or are we to continue giving our beer business to Monterey?

Then, too, when a Carmel customer enters a Monterey grocery for his case of beer, the wary merchant informs him of the fact that he has a very special on cheese, butter, eggs, or what have you, ad infinitum. Net result, one case of beer plus many other commodities coming into Carmel, while the purchase price remains in Monterey.

If beer were a nuisance or truly intoxicating, we might sacrifice these things for a principle. We defy the most ardent prohibitionist to get drunk on 4% beer! We defy the most ardent prohibitionist to find cause to deny the nourishing, body-building qualities which real beer possesses. We defy the most ardent prohibitionist to find a human being who can, at the very most, receive more than a gentle warming reaction from consumption of beer.

Police chiefs, everywhere, are finding that beer has cut down drunkenness and disorder. More and more radical anti-alcoholic leaders are coming to realize that beer is a natural, healthful beverage that is neither habit-forming nor injurious to the human system. To vote for beer is to vote for a new prosperity in Carmel. It is to vote for giving our fellow neighbors the right to be on business equality with our neighboring city.

The final article of this series will appear next week.

High School Proposes Cut In Art, Music, Counseling Classes

A straight 15 per cent cut in the salaries of all teachers at the Monterey high school and a 15 per cent cut in the salaries of all teachers at the Carmel high school are proposed by J. R. McKillop, superintendent of the school. According to McKillop, under his budget, a saving of $25,000 will be made as compared with last year. This is the first cut in salaries that has been proposed at the high school.

The slash includes a 15 per cent reduction in the salary of McKillop, who as superintendent of the high school receives $458 a month.

Whether the board will make any changes in the administrative force of the school, could not be learned. The question of the necessity of both a superintendent and a principal at the school as is now the case may be carefully considered.

Curtailment of classes in art, music, counseling and Americanization will also be taken up by the board, which would mean the elimination of several instructors.

It is understood that a delegation of Carmel parents will be on hand at the Saturday meeting to protest against the curtailment of these departments. It is claimed that if no changes are proposed in the shop and carpentry classes, there should be no curtailment in the arts.

Counseling of backward and retarded children, one of the better known features at the high school, also will be materially curtailed under the terms of McKillop's budget.

Prominent Physician

Reopens Offices

Dr. R. J. Cluen will be back with a down-town office again on Monday next. After practicing with his home in the Mesa as headquarters for a year and more, he has opened offices in El Paseo building on Dolores street, in the court.

His health has greatly improved during the interval of comparative rest, and with restored health has come increased practice. The offices selected by him are large and pleasant, and are fitted with his extensive and most modern surgical and medical appliances. Office hours will be from 11 to 12, from 2:30 to 4:30 except Thursdays and Saturdays, and by appointment. The telephone is Carmel 202.

"Broadway" Next Offering Of Community Players

In the days when the Bright Young People were saying "Everything's hot as hot," "Don't be a dumbbell!" and "Atta boy," there was produced a play called "Broadway," one of the first backstage dramas which were to prove so popular within the next years. That "jaunty, gamin melodrama," as one critic called it, is to be the offering of the Carmel Community Players on the nights of May 18, 19, 20 and 21.

It is especially appropriate that a play dealing with the stage-door atmosphere of New York's most brightly lighted street should be directed by a man who knows that magic realm—Frank Sheridan. He knows the stage and screen from long years' experience and there probably isn't an actor in Carmel whose opinion is more valued.

Sheridan has a skillful assistant in Kit Cooke, and the two have chosen a very satisfactory cast. The play is essentially youthful in its tempo, its devil-may-care attitude, its liveliness and thrills, so the Young Things of Carmel have been given a chance to act. In the song-and-dance-and-wise-crack group are included Tiny Pearson, Lu Jones, Patty Johnson, Ruth Austin, Betty Pinkham, Holly Smith, Edwina Pinkham and Ruth Pinkham. Comedy parts will be played by Helen Wilson and Milton Latham; Sam Ethridge is cast as the cabaret director, and Millard Pierson has the part of waiter. A sinister note of contrast is provided by the underworld characters played by Jack Gruber, Robert Parrott and Larry Gruber. Byington Ford represents Law and Order in the role of a "dick."

Tickets will be on sale at Stanford's drug store, Carmel 150.

Inspection of School

Edifice Is Proposed

Possibility of an inspection of Sunset school building with a view to determining its construction stability in the event of an earthquake is now being considered by the board of trustees.

At a meeting of the board Tuesday night, the matter came under discussion but no definite decision has been made. There is a general feeling, however, that the building is soundly constructed and an inspection of the kind proposed would be an added expense, it was pointed out at the meeting.

Ewig Named Chairman

Local School Board

E. H. Ewig, recently elected a member of the board of trustees of Sunset School was named as chairman at a meeting of the group held Monday night. Miss Clara Kellogg will continue as clerk of the board.

The trustees decided to hold future meetings, as usual on the first Tuesday evening of each month at 7:45 o'clock instead of 7:30.

John T. O'Brien a student at Santa Clara, was a week-end visitor in Carmel.

Mrs. H. C. Rolley spent a few days in San Jose this week.

The best home-bargain Carmel ever offered

$7,500.

This bargain would be considered good even in communities where bargains now appear to be normal. In Carmel it is outstanding.

This home is for a family of people who wish to be permanently established, in surroundings giving physical comfort and mental enjoyment.

The home is delightfully planned, affording spaciousness, light, sunshine, seclusion. It is on a large piece of land, with trees and Ocean view. Paved patio opening off the livingroom is made private by the gardening.

The house consists of large livingroom with nice fireplace, three bedrooms and two baths, clothes closets, good sized kitchen, large breakfast-room, plenty of windows, floor furnaces, best wiring. Garage opens off a walled-in garden, and there's a guest room and bath attached.

Considering the present valuation of land in that neighborhood, the cost of the original building and the cost of additions to the property (not changes, but additions), the value is around—$18,000.

Allow liberally for depreciation, allow for present lowered cost of building, and the buyer will still have a saving of around $5,000.

And, the furniture, which would cost not far from $1,000, is to remain.

We are allowing a generous amount of time for investigation of this property, but if it has not sold the price is to back up to a more normal price.

The situation is one of the best in Carmel; one block from the "17-Mile Drive" toll gate; two blocks to the dunes. Established neighborhood.

The price of $7,500. will not be cut

Frank Wickman Lectures

By Hal Garrott

All of Carmel's pianists and a fair sprinkling of the public attended a lecture on Piano Technique by Frank Wickman, last Friday in the Denny Watrous Gallery. Mr. Wickman is an expert in a field that deserves more attention and enjoys an important following in New York and San Francisco.

The great piano virtuosi all too often do not understand the gymnastics, physics, psychology and physiology employed in their attacks on the keyboard. Guided by heart, ear and brain they do things with arms, hands and fingers they have never bothered to analyze. Franz Liszt played passages to demonstrate to Amy Fay, American music student, how they should sound, but was unable to show her how the keys were struck. Violinist Kreisler could only account for his magic performance with the cryptic comment, that he could play anything he could think!

Frank Wickman was advised by Harold Bauer to train for the concert stage, but Bauer could not name a single teacher competent to develop the technical equipment Wickman needed. "With my colleagues and myself, many of the things we do on the keyboard are instinctive. We haven't the faintest idea how we do them."

It was up to Frank Wickman to investigate. After thirty years of close observation, he has solved many puzzling problems in finger gymnastics. And now, with a reasonably gifted musician, he is able to develop technical finish approaching more or less the force, speed, and tone qualities of a concert artist. Even pianists of note have been benefitted by findings analyzed, classified and lucidly presented by this pioneer in scientific, empirical approach to the art of piano playing. Margaret Tilly at the piano effectively illustrated the lecturer's points—as did a cross section of a Steinway keyboard action.

"Maedchen in Uniform"
To Play at Local Theatre

When "Maedchen in Uniform" opens at the Carmel Theatre for a special 2-day engagement on May 9 and 10, Tuesday and Wednesday, it will give Carmel theatre-goers an opportunity to witness the first German made talking picture that has ever achieved a Broadway of 4 months at the Criterion Theatre and broken house records held by such great American films as "The Covered Wagon," "Wings," and "The Smiling Lieutenant."

Few films in recent years, foreign-made or otherwise, have been so lauded by the critics of the entire world, for its success has been universal. In London it ran for over six months; in Berlin it has been playing for over a year; and in Paris its run at the Marigny Theatre gives every indication of extending through the winter. It opened on the coast last Spring.

The story of "Maedchen in Uniform" is one of life in a boarding school for daughters of Prussian army officers and members of the aristocracy. It shows how a lonely girl reacts to harsh and impersonal discipline, how she responds to the sympathetic treatment given her by an understanding teacher, how the head mistress of the school is affronted when she misinterprets the ensuing student-teacher relationship, and how the other girls in the school revolt against the stern and unfeeling philosophy of education and guidance imposed upon them.

Henry Cowell Series
Begins Tomorrow Night

Henry Cowell is back again. Each year that Henry Cowell returns to California from his activities in Europe and New York, he comes with new honors and attainments to his credit.

Tomorrow evening, in the Denny Watrous Gallery, Mr. Cowell will tell briefly of some of his findings under the research he has carried on for the last year at the University of Berlin under the Guggenheim Foundation. The subject of Cowell's research has been Primitive Musics of the World. He has studied music of Arabia, Persia, Turkey, Egypt, Tunis, Morocco, Australian Bushmen, Tahiti, Greece, Siam, Cambodia, China, etc. through rare records, the only existing ones of their kind, listening to some of them over three hundred times.

Records used by Cowell are many of them unique in America. The opportunity to hear them, illumined by Mr. Cowell's comments on their very definite scale and musical organization, will be a course in Primitive Music, paralleling that which Mr. Cowell gave last winter at the New School for Social Research in New York City.

This first of Cowell's ten talks on "Musics of the World," illustrated by the records spoken of, will be on the music of the Near East—Persia, Arabia, Turkey, Egypt, Tunis and Morocco, tomorrow evening. Season tickets for the entire series are available, with special rates for students. Mr. Donald Clampett of San Francisco is visiting in Carmel.

SUPPLEMENT

Merchants To Attend Important Meeting Tonight

All merchants of the village are urged to attend a meeting at Pine Inn at 8 p.m. tonight to receive information regarding the circulation of Carmel Dollars and to decide what is their pleasure regarding an additional issue, the present issue being almost exhausted. Members of the Employment Commission as well as several residents will also be present, to present the problems to be faced, and to attempt to arrive at a more harmonious reception and use of the Dollars.

It is apparent that some merchants, perhaps inadvertently, are not cooperating with the residents and the other merchants, and it is hoped that the situation will be presented to them in a sufficiently forceful and clear manner so that they may see just what harm they are doing to the Dollars as well as to themselves.

Dr. Leslie Learned of All Saints Church in Pasadena, will hold services at the local All Saints on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

Through its secretary, Miss J. M. Culbertson, the Carmel Art Association denies any connection of the Quatr'z Arts ball held recently.

Council Orders Drastic Steps To Collect Business Licenses

Carmel's temperamental merchants who refuse to pay delinquent taxes will be forced to appear in court, the city council decided at Wednesday night's meeting.

"The time has come when we must stop delinquencies or drop the revenue from business licenses and place it on the shoulders of every property owner," Mayor John Catlin told the council.

Willard Whitney, in charge of drafting a new business license, said that the majority of merchants considered that the paying of a business license was part of their overhead expense, just like rent or an electric bill.

The matter was referred to City Attorney Argyll Campbell to institute suit in the small claims court against delinquent merchants. Around $600 in fees is now due the city.

Fears that a recent decision of the district court of appeals eliminating local option law on the sale of beer would affect Carmel were set aside by a ruling given by City Attorney Campbell. He said the passage last week of the state beer regulation bill granted local option to cities that wanted to remain dry. The beer election will be held as scheduled.

Other matters acted upon by the city council included appointment of Leon Narvaez as janitor for the city hall; appropriation of $800 from the general fund for oil and grading additional streets; to appear in court, the city council decided at Wednesday night's meeting.

The Council will meet again May 22.

The Misses Barbara and Betty Joyce with their mother, were in Carmel this week-end.

A New Type of Furniture Has Been Created

The Romance of Early California Lives Again

Carmel furniture owes its beauty and unique charm to one of the most colorful periods in California history. The days of the missions and padres, of the great ranches, the picturesque Spanish and Mexican governors. In Carmel furniture you see vividly personified the romance, the hospitality, the color of those romantic days.

... and now

Holman's Department Store has been chosen as the only store on the Peninsula to present

Carmel Furniture

An entirely new furniture style has been created, and HOLMAN's has the honor of presenting it in its first complete showing! Designed by one of Hollywood's foremost decorative artists, Carmel furniture combines vigor and color of romantic Early California with a sophistication that is wholly of today. We invite you to come in and get acquainted with this lovely furniture. Our ten display rooms have been furnished with Carmel furniture.

ISSUES OF THE ELECTION

The campaign for and against the sale of beer inside Carmel's boundaries is becoming more and more tense as the day of election draws near. Arguments pro and con are being circulated by word of mouth and in print. Both sides are optimistic of the result.

The argument that seems best calculated to win votes for the pro-beer forces is that local grocers will be placed at a distinct disadvantage with grocers over the hill, even as to their general business, if they are not allowed to sell beer to such customers as desire it. The resident who must travel to Monterey for this part of his supplies is apt to purchase there the balance of his order. And every man or woman who votes to keep beer sales from Carmel stores, should cast a ballot with a distinct promise in his mind that the local grocers are not to be allowed to suffer by such action.

The best argument of the anti-beer contingent is that Carmel has a distinct residential asset in its freedom from any sort of merchandising of liquors by legal right. The claim is that Carmel's immunity from the liquor traffic, even before the XVIII Amendment and the Volstead Act, was one of the things that helped build Carmel into a village of fine homes.

One of the amazing things of the campaign is that many of the wettest of our people are voting "No" in this contest, and are urging that Carmel retain its old policy of no sales. Men who voted for the repeal of the Wright Act last fall, and are strongly for the abrogation of the XVIII Amendment, are against allowing the sale of beer in Carmel. This makes any forecast of the poll of May 15 doubtful.

That there will be a large vote is not doubtful. Interest is keen and both sides are being carefully organized to get out their adherents on election day. The anti-beer

THE SENTINEL

I am a cypress tree, that has been aged
by the long stretch of years of storms, of calm seas that glisten;
of winds that tear and moan,
of mists that shroud indefinitely
through my branches,
by the pine covered tear laden hills of Carmel.

Centuries pass me by, and people walking and talking of their earthly joys and sorrows;
I stand and listen
and lend my back bracing against the elements.
Ships pass and leave no trace of passing but their smoke remains in the needles of my leaves.
The fog horns of distress sound in my ears and I look upon the bleaching bones of wrecked masts.

I am their sentinel that guards through the dim outposts of time their bodies.
My roots are in the cliffs of immeasurable shores;
therefore I am strong,
and still stand
Silent.

F. L. Tupas
in Honolulu Star-Bulletin

forces feel that the withdrawal of the two secondary propositions on the ballot gives them a distinct advantage. They claim that many who would have voted to allow beer sales under rules made and through licenses granted by our city council, will not accept the dictates of the new state law as to permits. Not enough authority is left the city, they say, to properly regulate the sales.

A decision by the Appellate Court this week, in a test case from Tulare County, brings another issue into the local campaign. According to these jurists, there is no law now in California that allows municipalities to determine liquor questions. The Wyllie law, which provided for local option, was, they claim, repealed by the Wright Act, and the repeal of the Wright Act did not bring back to life the Wyllie Act. Which decision, should it be upheld by the State Supreme Court, would make Carmel's May 15 election a useless affair, whichever way it resulted.

THE RAVAGING OAK WORM

Elsewhere in this issue of the PINE CONE, Miss Elizabeth McClung White calls attention to the menace of the caterpillars to Carmel's oak trees. Hardly had the spring foliage grown green over the skeleton branches denuded by the oak moths last fall, than the caterpillars began their work of destruction. Already hundreds of live oaks are looking gray and dead because of this visitation.

Many of these trees are upon the city streets. It is possible to protect them by spraying them now. As Miss White suggests, no employment of relief funds would be more satisfactory to our people than protection of these trees. A sprayer might be purchased, or perhaps rented. The cost of materials is not excessive. And the feeling of the people that the city was making an effort to save the beauty of foliage on its trees would spur on private protection.

People Talked About

Edward Kuster, Carmel's theatrical figure in the little theatre movement, will soon be back at his home following an unusually successful season in San Francisco.

"The Beggar on Horseback" and "Sister Benvenuta" were widely acclaimed not only by large audiences but by all the leading San Francisco and eastbay dramatic critics. Kuster plans to bring "Sister Benvenuta" to Carmel sometime next month.

Says George Warren, dramatic critic of the Chronicle of Kuster's "Benvenuta" production:

Here delicacy, pace, rhythm, mood, atmosphere are everything, for the fable itself is a wisp of a thing, worth no more than a passing sigh of exaltation. Very different from the raucous, ribald fun of "Beggar on Horseback," or the moral problem of "The Intruder," other productions in San Francisco on which Mr. Kuster's right to venture as an impresario rest.

Stevens wrote "Sister Benvenuta," which he called "The Nursery Maid of Heaven," for his students at Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh, Pa., where he was the founder of the dramatic department. The beauty of this little play, which must be put into the category of "The Cradle Song," "The Kingdom of God," both by the Sierras, and Maurice Maeterlinck's gorgeous "Sister Beatrice," which is the foundation of Von Hofmannstahl's great spectacle, "The Miracle," took it beyond the limits of Mr. Stevens' class in acting, and has given it appeal wherever dramatic art is practiced.

A Venetian convent is the scene of the play—a convent where ladies of the great families of Venice and the surrounding country find refuge, to which certain members of each of these noble dynasties are dedicated, whether they feel a vocation for the convent cell or not. Thus one finds the crippled Sister Benvenuta, youngest child of a distinguished line, as a favored and petted member of the sisterhood. She is a child-like creature, who finds delight in loving the image of the Christ Child, used at Christmastide in the representation of the manger at Bethlehem, and kept locked up among the vestments for the rest of the year.

Mr. Kuster, by the use of lights, by careful timing, by holding the tone of the dialogue at a level pitch, has created a thing of great beauty out of this simple, fanciful, lovely little tale. There are exaltation and spiritual power in the performance and moving beauty. The tenderness of a group of noblewomen toward one of their number who is physically handicapped is beautifully shown in the Stevens play and in Kuster's direction.

"Sister Benvenuta" is a worthy and splendid item in a season's theatregoing, and is recommended to lovers of the playhouse.

Samuel G. Blythe in last week's Saturday Evening Post has an interesting article on the west coast family retainer, the Chinese cook. As he says, there are only a few left of these loyal house servants, most of them in San Francisco or the north half of the state, and they are rapidly disappearing, "extinct, superannuated, or returned to China to die."

Blythe, whose home is at Pebble Beach, secured his first Chinese cook a number of years ago.

Gee Sing was an old man then, just how old Blythe could never find out. For seven years, and until his death, Gee Sing had complete control of the menage, ruling capably and economically, but with an iron hand.

"He fitted up the kitchen himself," says Blythe, "selected the cooking and other utensils, supervised the installation of the range, when he got it in his kitchen ice box, and similar essential what-nots for the service parts of the house. He considered himself personally responsible for the well-being of the establishment, and rarely left the place. To him I was 'bossee,' but he was boss of the boss. He would consult me gravely, and then do as he deemed best. He impressed his position on the gardener and on the milkman, the garbage man, the laundry man, the delivery boys, and all who came along in various capacities.

"I used to go to Monterey with him for the fun of watching his marketing operations. No ordering over the telephone for him. He took a huge basket, and serenely, imperturbably picked out what he wanted, regardless of the fidgeting of the merchants. If Gee Sing needed a dozen oranges, he carefully inspected all oranges for sale, selecting two or three at one place and making up his dozen from three or four stores. When he had his dozen oranges he had the dozen best oranges on sale in Monterey that day.

The poultryman who sold him a chicken accomplished a great feat, for Sing inspected every chicken in the town before he bought the one he needed. I stood back and watched him poke and appraise every fowl on sale that day, but when he picked his chicken, it was a real chicken, and what he could do with it would make Brillat-Savarin envious. It was so with all meats, and everything else he bought. A shopping trip with Gee Sing was a revelation in getting one's money's worth. If he wanted a fish, he went down to the fish wharf, where the boats bring in their great loads of Monterey King salmon, sole, Spanish mackerel, striped bass, rock bass, smelt, shrimps, crabs and what not, just caught, and no fish salesman at the retail stalls could give him a fish that had been out of the water more than two hours, to say nothing of selling him one. As for their vegetables, he scorned them. He raised his own."

In Carmel's early days, a Chinese cook, by name Sang, used to go from house to house as hospitality required extra help for the kitchen, cooking and serving the diners. Popular dinner guests might find Sang at their elbows, and Sang's well cooked dinners on their plates, at any of a dozen houses. The arrangement was well understood locally, and Sang's greeting of the guests he came upon so often, was dignified and pleasant.

The arrival in Carmel of a well known editor from the east was the occasion for a series of dinners among the writers living here, naturally intent upon hospitality (continued on page eleven)

The town of Ceres, which has been hitched to Carmel in publicity recently because it was the only other town in the state with a clause in its deeds that prevented the sale of intoxicating liquors within its boundaries, went wet recently by the repeal of its little Volstead act by popular vote of 152 to 116. Heirs of the Whitmore estate, which had placed the clause in all early day deeds, announced that they would not enforce the right.

San Antonio Street Gets Rough Massage

After almost a week of constant grading and oiling, San Antonio street, one of the main thoroughfares in the residential district, took on the appearance of a hard-surfaced job today.

Crews of unemployed, working with the street department have been in charge of the job with William Askew, street superintendent, supervising. Other principal streets in the village are scheduled for grading in anticipation of heavy summer traffic.

Mission San Antonio Has Annual Fiesta

May 7 is fiesta day at Mission San Antonio de Padua, near Jolon, on the early stage coach road from San Francisco to Los Angeles. The huge fiesta, characteristic of those of the Spanish Dons, annually honors St. Anthony, patron Saint of the Mission and Father Junipero Serra, its founder, and commemorates the return of the historic old building to the control of the Franciscan fathers in 1928. With the sunrise, down from their canyon homes to join in the festivities, will come the descendants of the Santa Lucia Indians, remnants of the once powerful tribe which built the aged structure under the kindly supervision of Father Serra and Father Buena-venture Sitjar, its first resident friar. Spanish vaqueros from the vast, rolling ranges of the huge Hearst estates will join hundreds of Californians in capturing for a day a glimpse of the Mission's colorful and romantic past.

Devotional services led by the faithful Franciscan fathers in the morning will be followed by a gigantic barbecue, broiling steaks of beef and lamb chops over glowing coals, in the manner of the ancient and haughty Spanish Dons.

Then will come an afternoon of festivities, dining, dancing and merry-making in the carefree spirit of Spanish California's glamorous past.

to the one who could make or mar. At one home after another the editor sat at table to be waited upon by the smiling Chinese, Sang. It was after the fifth or sixth of these dinners that he expressed himself.

"You know," he said, "that to me all Chinese look exactly alike. Surprising you'll say, but I can't see a trace of difference in the looks of your servants."

There was a moment of embarrassment about the table, then Sang lifted it. With his grave smile and pleasing voice, he said, "All right, Mistah Blank. We all cousins here, same cantong from China."

Caterpillars Versus Inertia

By Elizabeth McClung White

Maybe we've had so much more beauty in Carmel than we can digest that we're in a state of spiritual coma.

Maybe we're only lazy. Or that we hope some outside force will work miracles for us.

If any one of us has enough energy to look up, we hope he'll turn his gaze into the green loveliness of the next oak tree he approaches.

Let's all of us take a peek at the nearest caterpillar making his slow but entirely efficient wiggle across one of the new shiny green leaves. The contempt in his bright eyes is easy to detect. No fear there. He won't hurry. He knows we don't bother much about him.

Knows we'll just talk about how much we love beauty, and then drop the subject.

And while gravitation turns our gaze downward to the painted sidewalks, our uninvited guests, with their millions of in-laws, will caterpillar along, undisturbed, in the green beauty overhead. And as the contemptuous gorgers move he leaves a trail of seared, perforated, blighted leaves on skeleton trees.

Pacific Grove was more intelligent in its removal of beauty. They cut their trees and warmed themselves by the fires.

And a city-owned tree-sprayer would cost no more than the modest pink petticoats hung over by the Hyde company on its bulbous display of daffodils, iris and spring flowers.

Mr. Hyde reported that the at-

As a broker we say to you that when the ever-increasing, and systematically returning, hordes of caterpillars and other tree-destroying animals have finished Carmel pilgrimages, and the last caterpillar goes over the Monterey hill with the last green leaf in his mouth, there'll be another appraisal of Carmel properties. As a property-owner you'll be mighty lucky on that day if the mark-down is only 1/2.

Inertia is expensive, but Carmelish and delightful.

Why bother?
